Date/Time: 08/02/2020 (Saturday) at 8:00 to 9:00 am

Topic: Spectrum of renal infections with focus on emphysematous pyelonephritis (EPN) & xantho-granulomatous pyelonephritis (XGPN)

Summary : Infections of kidney is a common scenario in day to day urological practice and they may cause significant morbidity and mortality. Xanthogranulomatous pyelonephritis is a rare inflammatory condition of the renal parenchyma that is associated with long-term partial obstruction and infections of the urinary tract. Because its symptoms can be non-specific, a diagnosis is often made with delay. Emphysematous pyelonephritis (EPN) is an uncommon infection characterized by gas in the renal parenchyma and surrounding tissues. This infection often has a fulminating course and can be fatal if left untreated.

Department will present a brief overview of entire spectrum of renal infections with focus on emphysematous pyelonephritis(EPN) & xantho-granulomatous pyelonephritis(XGPN).
