About JIPMER

Jawaharlal Institute of Postgraduate Medical Education and Research (JIPMER) originated as Ecole de Medicine de Pondicherry established by the French Government in the year 1823. This medical school was converted into Dhanvantari Medical College at the time of de facto transfer of Pondicherry to Government of India. It was later renamed JIPMER in the year 1964.

In 2008, JIPMER was declared an institute of National Importance by an Act of Parliament. Spread over a sprawling 195-acre campus in an urban locale of Pondicherry, JIPMER is 160km by road from Chennai. A new campus was established in 2016 at Karaikal.

About Puducherry

Puducherry is a quaint little seaside town on the coast of the Bay of Bengal. It is best accessed by road, though it has train service. The nearest airport is in Chennai.

This French foreshore is an exquisite blend of cultures from across the globe. It has at various times in history, been ruled by the Dutch, the English, and the French. Many of their picturesque boulevards have stood the test of time to give Puducherry its distinctive character.

Pondicherry's star attractions are the Sri Aurobindo Ashram and Auroville (the International City of Unity).

Tourists are also attracted by the eclectic cuisine of Puducherry, beautiful stretches of beaches and heritage buildings dating back to the colonial era. The town has a unique range of shopping avenues to offer, specialising in the antique and the indigenous.
